

Former Governor Roy Barnes Speaks to Students at Clayton State

by Leigh Duncan, University Relations

Former legislator and governor, and current businessman, the Hon. Roy E. Barnes, spoke to the student body, faculty, staff and local citizens at Clayton College & State University on Tuesday, Sept. 21 as part of the University's Lyceum program.

Each year at Clayton State, Lyceum presents a series of concerts, lectures and visual artists for the intellectual enrichment and enjoyment of the student body and the community. Programs have included four Nobel laureates, numerous Pulitzer Prize recipients, and outstanding performance and visual artists.

Barnes, a veteran public speaker, talked about "Politics in Georgia." He addressed a standing-room-only crowd of more than 250 faculty, staff and (mostly) students.

"We live in a critical time for both our state and our nation. Never have I seen more division among the parties. Instead of facts and issues, we will decide these elections on who has the best negative ads," he said. "We've always been different, but instead of civil discourse, we choose to attack.

"Yearn for leaders who have solutions instead of slogans."

He went on to talk about the economy and international concerns, including his report that the federal government will borrow $500 billion this year.

John Campbell Appointed Associate Dean Of Clayton State School of Arts & Sciences

Dr. John G. Campbell, professor and head of the Department of Natural Sciences at Clayton College & State University, was recently appointed associate dean of the School of Arts & Sciences by Dr. Ray Wallace, dean.

A tenured professor, Campbell was hired as head of the Department of Natural Sciences in 1996, a position he will retain. Wallace is confident the addition of an associate dean to Arts & Sciences will better serve the needs of the school and Clayton State as a whole.

The School of Arts & Sciences is the largest school in the University. With seven departments, 12 majors and 1994 students enrolled – it comprises nearly one-third of Clayton State's entire student body and more than 60 percent of the university's total credit hours taught.

For the most part, Campbell will be handling a variety of the administrative tasks, and, according to Wallace, the position will allow the dean and associate dean to focus on several different areas at the same time.

Local Delegation Visits Washington On Behalf of Forts MacPherson and Gillem

by John Shiffert, University Relations

A delegation of local civic and educational leaders met with Principal Assistant Under Secretary of Defense for Installations & Environment Philip W. Grone and Congressman David Scott in Washington, D.C. on Thursday, Sept. 23 to discuss the future of Fort MacPherson and Ft. Gillem.

Included in the delegation was Clayton College & State University President Dr. Thomas K. Harden, City of Morrow Director of Economic Development Grant Wainscott, Clayton County Superintendent of Schools Dr. Barbara Pulliam, Colonel Fred Bryant, deputy director of the Georgia Military Affairs Coordinating Council, Forest Park Mayor Charles Hall, Andy Alexander of Resources Consultants International – a civilian contractor for military, and Tina Coria, representing the Henry County Board of Commissioners.

The group, representing the Save Ft. MacPherson/Gillem Foundation, met with Grone and Scott to help explain and highlight the significance of both installations to the metro Atlanta economy and community. Of particular interest to Grone, and the Department of Defense, was the jointness of the two bases... the fact that both facilities are more than just single service installations. Fort MacPherson, for example, houses and supports the following major activities: the U.S. Army Forces Command; the Third U.S. Army/Forces Central Command; the U.S. Army Reserve Command; the Southeast Region Office, U.S. Army; the Installation Management Agency; and the U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventative Medicine – South. The major activities at Ft. Gillem include: the First U.S. Army; the U.S. Army Third Criminal Investigation Region; the U.S. Army Second Recruiting Brigade; the Military Entrance Processing Station; the U.S. Army and Air Force Exchange Service Atlanta Distribution Center; and the Georgia Army National Guard headquarters.

“We also talked about how efficient and effective the bases are,” notes Wainscott. “They are critical for the community and have been great partners with all of us over the years.”

One example of those partnerships comes from the relationship between Ft. Gillem’s Criminal Investigation Region and Clayton State. Over the years, experts from Ft. Gillem have taken part in numerous forensic science seminars at the University that have contributed to the education of Clayton State students, local high school students, high school teachers from throughout the Southeast, and the public.

Congressman Scott has been very important and proactive in this process,” adds Wainscott. “We spent a lot of time with him and he is very knowledgeable about how important the bases are to our economy.” ■

Clayton State Staff Member Called to Active Duty

Jamye Sanders, administrative specialist in the School of Health Sciences, has been called for deployment as of October 4, 2004. Sanders will serve for 545 days on behalf of the U.S. Army in mission Iraqi Freedom. Keep her in your prayers and thoughts.

Mock Crisis Simulates Response to Chemical Explosion

by Leigh Duncan, University Relations

On Thursday, Sept. 23, 45 administrators from 25 University System of Georgia (USG) schools traveled to Clayton College & State University to participate in a mock crisis, a chemical lab explosion.

Bates Canon, director of Counseling and Career Services at Clayton State and chair of the Counseling Director's Association of the USG, coordinated the two-day event for University System counselors, psychologists, housing directors, and other University System staff. The workshop, taught by Dr. Sam D. Bernard, a licensed senior psychological examiner, traumatologist, and nationally certified counselor and psychologist, culminated in the mock crisis Thursday.

As a result of terrorism, crime and other emergency situations that could potentially threaten college campuses in Georgia, the Counseling Director's Association selected the Acute Traumatic Stress Management (ATSM) & University Crisis Response model developed by the American Academy of Experts in Traumatic Stress as part of its 2004 initiative to begin developing a crisis response network within the university system.

This model was selected because it focuses on crisis incidents typical to universities, addresses crisis response "during the crisis" (including the critical initial 72-hours once a crisis begins), and provides the option for board certification in university crisis response.

The course prepares university staff to provide practical and effective strategies for addressing the emotional needs of people during actual crisis situations. The workshop included both lecture and experiential activities with live victims (to which the Morrow Fire Department applied realistic moulage) and the local (university) press.

"The victims and the press did an excellent job acting as if in a real crisis," says Canon. "The participants were able to take turns 'practicing' their new skills, both coaching and observing, while getting a real feel of an actual emergency situation. It was an excellent drill."

Dr. Maya Hoover to Lead Clayton State Student Performers to Liszt Academy in Budapest

Dr. Maya Hoover, assistant professor of Music at Clayton College & State University, will be leading three outstanding Clayton State students - Elena Cholakova, Patrick Thompson and Brandon Tucker — to Hungary to perform at the "Juilliard of Europe," the Liszt Academy, on Oct. 14, 2004.

"They are both top musicians and top representatives of Clayton State," says Hoover of Cholakova, Thompson and Tucker. While they are in Budapest, the students will also perform at the home of George H. Walker, the American ambassador to Hungary.

Hoover and the students will be in Hungary from Oct. 10 to Oct. 16, and will be joined by Clayton State President Dr. Thomas K. Harden from Oct. 13 to Oct. 16. In addition to her work with the Clayton State students, Hoover expects to also have the opportunity to teach a master class at the Liszt Academy. In addition, one of Clayton State's goals for this trip is to have Liszt Academy students perform at Spivey Hall next year and to make this an annual, alternating exchange between the two institutions.

A leading scholar and researcher of Latin American art song, Hoover is also an active performer, teacher, clinician, music education philosopher and author, in addition to her faculty position at Clayton State. Her accomplishments in the performance and teaching arenas have earned her invitations to appear around the world, and her specialty in the music of the 20th and 21st centuries has led her to collaborations with some of today's leading composers.

Redd Horrocks “Transportation Champion”

Clayton State student Redd Horrocks gets her education while giving back to the environment. For the past year, Horrocks has been part of the Clean Air Challenge and was recently named University RideShare’s “Transportation Champion” for September for diligently using commuting alternatives.

Horrocks lives 55 miles away from Clayton State and carools or uses public transit on a daily basis. Her commute generally takes two and a half hours, but weather related problems – like recent Hurricane Ivan – make the ride difficult. Downed trees on the MARTA line stretched her ride-time to four and a half hours!

“Redd’s devotion to school is amazing,” says Joan Murphy, University RideShare coordinator and administrator in Clayton State’s Public Safety Office. According to Murphy, Horrocks leaves home at 5:30 a.m. to be on time for her 9 a.m. class. “Most students would agree that this is not the ideal schedule!” Murphy laughs.

When she’s not carpooling, Horrocks gets a ride to the Doraville MARTA station; takes MARTA to the airport; and then transfers to C-Tran, the Clayton County transit system, to arrive at Clayton State.

Horrocks takes 16 hours of courses, contributes to the student newspaper as an associate editor, participates in student government, acts in Clayton State Theater productions, serves as an Ambassador for the University, and works in the Clayton State Office of Admissions.

Though she plans to move closer to the University, Horrocks hopes to continue her contribution to the environment by driving to school three days a week and using transit two days a week.

UGA’s Dr. Robert Pratt Lectures to the Teaching American History Program at Spivey Hall Oct.5

Dr. Robert A. Pratt, head of the History Department at the University of Georgia, will be the next speaker for the Teaching American History grant program, the joint effort by Clayton College & State University, three metro Atlanta School Systems, the Georgia Archives, the Southeastern Region of the National Archives and Records Administration, the Jimmy Carter Presidential Library, the Georgia Council for the Humanities and the Georgia Department of Education.

Pratt, one of seven master historians in the Teaching American History program, titled, Living American History: Past to Present, will be speaking on “From Brown v. Board of Education to Holmes v. Danner: The Role of the 14th Amendment in the Making of Civil Rights Law.” His lecture will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 5 in Spivey Hall, on the Clayton State main campus in Morrow, beginning at 7 p.m. Although Pratt’s address is targeted to the high school history teachers who make up the “student body” of Living American History: Past to Present, Clayton State faculty, staff, students and the general public are invited to attend, free of charge.

Living American History: Past to Present, is funded through a U.S. Department of Education grant for $984,115 as part of the Teaching American History grant program, which supports three-year projects to improve teachers’ knowledge, understanding and appreciation for American history through intensive, ongoing professional development. According to the U.S. Department of Education, which announced 114 such grants nationwide on Sept. 22, 2003, “projects must be in partnership with organizations that have extensive knowledge of American history, including libraries, museums, nonprofit history or humanities organizations, and higher education institutions.”

The Henry County Board of Education, the official grant recipient and lead system, joined with the Fayette County School System and the Cobb County School System in supplying the student/teachers. Clayton State, the two archives, the Carter Library, the Council for Humanities and the Georgia Department of Education act as partners to the three school systems in the program.

The author of, “We Shall Not Be Moved: the Desegregation of the University of Georgia,” Pratt holds a B.A. from Virginia Commonwealth University and an M.A. and a Ph.D. from the University of Virginia. He has taught at the University of Georgia since earning his Ph.D., serving successively as assistant professor of History, interim director of the Institute for African-American Studies, associate professor of History, professor of History and professor and chair of the Department of History. His teaching areas include; African-American History, Twentieth Century United States History, Southern History, Race and Ethnicity in America, Multicultural America, The Civil Rights Movement, Popular Culture in Film & Cinema, and the African-American Experience in Film & Documentary. ■

Clayton State's Criminal Justice Program Tops 100 in First Semester

by Lauren Baker, University Relations

Criminal Justice, one of Clayton State's newest baccalaureate degree programs, has topped 100 in enrollment in its inaugural semester.

"We expected a strong enrollment in this program, but this has exceeded our expectations," says Dr. Gene Hatfield, chair of the Department of Social Sciences. The program, which officially began with the 2004 fall semester, has generated such commotion that prospective students – many of whom are already full-time law enforcement employees – are lining up to pursue the degree.

Dean of the School of Arts & Sciences Dr. Ray Wallace expressed his pride in the program's high enrollment, remembering the work that went into bringing the degree to the University. "We really moved quickly, but carefully, to get this program up and running," he says. "It is gratifying to see these new students on campus for this important degree program."

Dr. Kevin Demmitt, program coordinator for Criminal Justice, receives phone calls on a daily basis from interested students. He credits the program's early success to the enthusiastic support of local criminal justice leaders such as Morrow Police Chief Charlie Sewell, who teaches part-time in the program. Sewell, in turn, believes the students are just as enthusiastic as the faculty.

"On several occasions class discussions have spilled over to the next class session because of the excitement of the students. It has been a real treat for me and I look forward to each class," he says.

In addition to local support, Demmitt believes the location of the Morrow campus proves attractive to local law enforcement, giving law officials the opportunity to continue their education close to home. With such a community demand, growth shows no signs of slowing, he said.

While current law enforcement view Clayton State's program as a means to further their education and advance their careers, many first-time students are choosing criminal justice with hopes of pursuing their own careers in law enforcement. Criminal justice senior Modesta "Margi" Clark (Locust Grove) sees the opportunity to make a difference in a post-911 world.

"Our country has a new focus that is driven by negative actions, and Clayton State is preparing new leaders to be available to assist in that focus. The opportunities in this field are growing by leaps and bounds. I'll be ready!" she says.

Clayton State's criminal justice program was designed with the help of area police departments, municipal and county jurisdictions and Clayton State alumni who currently serve in law enforcement. Students in the program choose from an array of courses offered during the day, in the evenings and on-line. Criminal justice majors tailor coursework around a core of essential studies, which helps them meet their individual career goals. ■

Some of those areas will include budget, outcome and assessments, and the development of the school's three new departments; Psychology, Communicative Arts and Integrative Studies, and Language and Literature. Additionally, both Wallace and Campbell will be involved in strategic planning with Campbell focusing on coordinating outcomes and assessment measures for the departments.

Campbell will also administer the School's new Advisement Center, having hired three new full-time advisors for its freshman and sophomore students. Campbell and several colleagues have been working to create a new advisement strategy. New software has also been installed to track student advisement and soon will be utilized by all five schools.

Campbell, a retired Colonel from the United States Army, is used to having his plate full and juggling responsibility. He believes that teaching, serving as a department head, and contributing as the associate dean will provide an excellent test of these abilities.

"Having an associate dean for the School of Arts and Sciences is a necessary part of the growth of the University," says Campbell.

"The position of associate dean is an essential element for our growth. We could not continue to grow and reach as many students, nor could we attract the caliber of quality faculty without John Campbell," Wallace concurs. "He is a faculty member through and through. He cares deeply for his faculty and treats them with the respect they are due. This is realized in turn by the way the faculty treats each other and our students." ■

University Joins Initiative to Spread the Word About Federal Careers

Clayton State Issues “Call to Serve”

Dr. Thomas K. Harden, president of Clayton College & State University, and the University’s Office of Counseling & Career Services has announced that the University has joined a nationwide initiative – Call to Serve — to encourage today’s college graduates to learn about federal jobs and pursue opportunities in the federal service.

“Call to Serve” is a national initiative designed to educate a new generation about the importance of a strong civil service, help re-establish links between federal agencies and campuses, and provide students with information about the unique and dynamic opportunities that federal jobs provide. Launched in April 2002 in partnership with the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM), “Call to Serve” has since grown to a national network of nearly 500 colleges and universities, 60 federal agencies and a dozen partner organizations.

“The events of Sept. 11, 2001 have created a deeper appreciation of public service among Americans and a desire by many students to find ways to contribute to the national good,” says Joan McElroy, Clayton State’s Employer Relations coordinator in the Office of Counseling & Career Services. “At the same time, now more than ever, our government needs bright, talented, and committed people to help it meet the demands of a new changing world.”

McElroy also notes that the Office of Counseling & Career Services will be informing students about Call to Serve by linking the Call to Serve web site (www.calltoserve.org) to the Counseling & Career Services web site (<http://adminservices.clayton.edu/ccs>) under “Internet Job Search.” McElroy also receives a monthly e-mail newsletter from Call to Serve, which informs the Office of Counseling & Career Services about upcoming hiring initiatives within different federal agencies.

“Another is their web site has a place for schools to post upcoming career days,” she adds. “As a result, federal agencies can easily contact schools in their area and attend the career day.”

In the next five years, more than half of all federal workers could be eligible to retire, including over 70 percent of senior managers. New employees are needed to sustain the programs.

The efforts of schools answering the Call to Service will be supported by the non-profit Partnership for Public Service, a nonpartisan organization dedicated to recruiting and retaining excellence in the federal civil service, and by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, the government’s human resources agency.

For more information about A Call to Serve, please visit the Partnership for Public Service’s Web site at www.calltoserve.org. ■

Hoover has previously appeared in recital throughout the United States performing works from the standard repertoire as well as lesser-known works. She enjoys a long-time collaboration with pianist Jose Meléndez, with whom she regularly appears in recitals, concerts, and master classes. Their unique partnership as a performing and teaching team coupled with their specialization in Latin American art song has afforded them invitations to appear throughout the United States and abroad.

On the operatic and concert stage, Hoover has sung roles from Xerxes (“Xerxes”) to Cio-Cio San (“Madama Butterfly”), and has appeared with orchestras in works from Bach to Babbitt. Sought-after for her research on Latin American art song, she serves on the Advisory Board of the Latin American Art Song Alliance, an organization dedicated to the promotion of songs from South America, Central America, and the Islands of the Caribbean. This past season featured her international focus with trips to South America and Western Europe, and included performances in Bolivia with the “Songs Across the Americas” festival, a “Taller de Canto” and recital at the Auditorio Jorge Tadeo Lozano in Bogotá, Colombia, and “La Bohème” (Mimi) with the New Operafestival di Roma in Italy. This season begins with a trip to the Franz Liszt Academy in Budapest, and presents the Hoover-Meléndez duo in recital from Honolulu, Hawaii to Spivey Hall in Atlanta.

Across the Campus

Athletics

Members of the Clayton State cross country and track teams would like to thank all those on campus who supported their efforts in the recent car wash fund raiser.

Clayton State freshman Olaitan Yusuf tied a school record in scoring four goals to help the Laker women's soccer team cruise to a 7-0 victory against North Greenville College in Tigerville, S.C. The Lakers scored early and often jumping out to a 5-0 lead in the first half. Senior Nkiru Okosieme opened the scoring frenzy with two straight goals, giving the Lakers a 2-0 lead. Yusuf struck four straight giving her 10 goals on the season. Her four goals tied a school record for goals in a match. Okosieme scored four goals in a match in the 2001 season against North Alabama, while Kiera Morris scored four goals in match last year against Spelman.

The Clayton State men's soccer team struck for two lightning quick goals and held on down the stretch to capture its sixth win of the season, defeating Peach Belt Conference opponent Francis Marion University 2-1 at Laker Field. With the win, the Lakers improved to 6-0-1 on the season and 1-0 in Peach Belt Conference action. However, Francis Marion sophomore forward Ashley Fortune scored a goal with three minutes remaining to break a scoreless match and propel the Patriots to a 1-0 Peach Belt Conference victory over Clayton State women's soccer team, dropping their record to 4-2 on the season and 0-1 in the Peach Belt.

Campus Life

The Volunteer Services Office of the Division of Campus Life at Clayton College & State University is currently conducting a Hurricane Victims Support Drive for the benefit of those affected by Hurricanes Charlie, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne. According to Vice President of Campus Life Dr. Kevin D. Rome, the initial goal was to raise $500 to give to the American Red Cross to help victims recover from what has been a truly devastating Hurricane season. However, after a week of collecting donations from among the Clayton State faculty, staff and students, that initial goal is within reach, and a new goal of $1000 has been put in place. Donation containers have been set up in the Student Center Cafeteria, and in the Bookstore and at the Information Desk in the new University Center.

Enrollment Services

The staff development workshop for Enrollment Services has been changed from Friday, Oct. 1 to Friday, Oct. 8. Enrollment Services Offices will close at noon on that date.

Homecoming

All faculty and staff interested in participating in the upcoming faculty/staff/student basketball game need to contact Mike Mead via e-mail before Oct. 6. The game will take place during Homecoming Week on Thursday, Oct. 21 as part of the "Second Annual Basketball Extravaganza" in the Athletic & Fitness Center gym. Tip-off is scheduled for 6 p.m. Make sure your health care insurance premiums are paid up!

Human Resources

Open Enrollment 2005 begins on Tuesday, Oct. 12, and ends on Friday, Nov. 12. More information to come.

Music

Clayton State part-time Music faculty member and pianist Lisa Leong's most recent Spivey Hall concert will be broadcast on WABE-FM's (90.1) "Atlanta Music Scene" on Monday, Oct. 25 at 9 p.m. Featuring music by Harvey, Adams and Stockhausen, Leong's performance on Atlanta Music Scene will be hosted by Tommy Joe Anderson. Leong, adjunct faculty at Clayton State, is currently pianist and artistic director of Bent Frequency, Atlanta's newest contemporary music ensemble. She has appeared as guest soloist and collaborative artist at Spivey Hall, Mannes College in New York City, Middle Tennessee State University at Murfreesboro as well as other venues in Philadelphia, Boston and San Antonio.

School of Business

The Clayton State Chapter of the Society for Advancement of Management (SAM) featured a "unique" speaker at its Tuesday, Sept. 28 meeting... Denise Purdy, owner of Lorna's Bridal & Prom in Peachtree City, who spoke on the importance of being unique in the business world. Purdy's address, "Individualism as an Entrepreneur," was made at the invitation of Clayton State student Elizabeth Vincent, president of the Clayton State SAM chapter. Lorna's Bridal & Prom specializes in retailing modest formal wear. Since starting her business in January 2004, Purdy has been busy doing more than selling modest fashions. She has been a spokesperson for compelling, modest fashion, having been featured in an article in the Atlanta Journal/Constitution, being interviewed by the Today Show, and having several other invitations to speak.

Women's Forum

The Clayton State Women's Forum is sponsoring a Chili Cook-Off in conjunction with the annual Silent Auction on Oct. 19. We invite your organization to join the fun and help raise money for the Women's Forum Scholarship Fund. Your organization can receive the publicity of participating and maybe even a trophy - if you are voted the best chili. Contact Benita Moore to sign up.

Faculty/Staff Fund Drive Reaches Halfway Point at Hot Dog Rally

Campaign chairs Rhonda Boozer, Jacob Chacko and the entire External Relations gang (aka Dr. Bryan Edwards, Reda Rowell, Terri Taylor-Hamrick, et al) hosted the Annual Hot Dog Rally as part of the Faculty/Staff Fund Drive on Thursday, Sept. 23, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the quad area outside of the Library.

Some 600 free hot dogs, chips and sodas were there to feed the hungry. The event also featured music (they even played the entire "Greatest Hits" album by The Boss!) and give-aways galore for faculty, staff and students.

During the rally, it was announced that the 2004 Faculty/Staff Fund Drive had reached the halfway point to its goal of $90,000.

Highlighting the event was "Clayton State Trivia." Not content with just giving away door prizes, External Relations made the assembled multitudes work for their prizes, asking several dozen Clayton State-related trivia questions and giving prizes for correct answers. Among some of the more popular questions (which just might appear in "Trivia Time" in some issue of Campus Review) were:

When did Clayton State become a University?

What was Mike Vollmer's first position at Clayton State?

Which Clayton State academic administrator was once director of the Clayton State Alumni Association?

What do Dr. Art Rosser and Pete Rose have in common?

Why did Dean Bud Miller leave Arvida Corporation?

What caused the power outage that shut down the Clayton State campus in January 2003?

What former Bent Tree Editor once played Loch?

When did ITP officially start?

What was the previous use for the site of the Clayton State campus?

What was The Career Expo previously called?

What were the names of Clayton State's first two swans?

Who is Clayton State's senior faculty member?

Who flips the flapjacks at the Annual Alumni Association Pancake Breakfast during Homecoming?

What was the name of the public celebration held by Clayton State on campus during the late 1990's?

Clayton State students from what two organizations took first place in national competitions this year?

Clayton State has had how many presidents?

What was the Student Center originally used for?

Where are Clayton State academic classes held, in addition to the main campus?

What former Clayton State administrator is now a full-time missionary?

What Clayton State faculty member is an expert on bats?

What Clayton State faculty member is a blacksmith in his spare time?

Mock Crisis, from p.3

Dr. Sandra (Sandy) Harrison, professor of Psychology and Social Science at Clayton State, who encouraged her students to be victims (and was a victim herself,) shared her experience as a 'victim.'

"I was surprised at how easy it was to 'get into character' and to be in shock and weeping," says Harrison. "The experience was lingering; even as late as 10 that evening, I kept recalling what people said to me and how it felt to be traumatized, nurtured, and consoled.

"The briefing after the episode was helpful. I think there would have been more "aftershocks" of the experience for the 'victims' if we hadn't been given the chance to talk about it."

A number of invited guests also observed during the drill, including Tonya Lam, associate vice-chancellor, Student Services, USG; Dr. Ron Koger, chief student affairs officer with Southern Polytechnic State University; and Dr. Kevin Rome, Clayton State's vice president of Campus Life, who stated he was pleased the event was hosted on the Clayton State campus. The training was "obviously a powerful and timely learning experience," Rome remarked.

The 45 USG employees who participated in the program were given the opportunity to put into practice what they learned in the classroom. The Q&A after the enactment gave the participants the opportunity for feedback by the 'victims.' Many expressed confidence that they are now better prepared to serve as valuable and contributing members of a crisis response team at their respective campuses. ■

Zeller and Otaki Join with Allison Swensen for Rare Duet for Tenor and Mezzo-Soprano

The Clayton State Music Department will present a rare opportunity to hear duets for tenor and mezzo-soprano at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 8, as acclaimed West Coast mezzo-soprano Allison Swensen joins the Clayton State duo recital team, tenor Dr. Kurt-Alexander Zeller and pianist Dr. Michiko Otaki, in Spivey Hall.

Swensen, who made her Carnegie Hall debut in the premiere of Taneyev's Upon Reading a Psalm, has appeared with symphony orchestras and opera companies across the country, including the Boston Opera, Syracuse Opera and all of the major performance organizations of the Pacific Northwest, and is well known in the Southeast through her many performances in Florida with Sarasota Opera and the Jacksonville Symphony. However, this free concert marks her first appearance in the Atlanta area.

Although duets for virtually all other voice combinations abound in the vocal repertoire, the combination of the low female voice and the high male voice has been comparatively neglected by composers and is not often heard. The centerpiece of the concert is Benjamin Britten's masterful Cantic II: Abraham and Isaac, written in 1952 for contralto Kathleen Ferrier and tenor Peter Pears. The text is drawn from one of the medieval Chester Mystery Plays and tells the dramatically harrowing Biblical story of how the Hebrew patriarch Abraham nearly sacrifices his own son, Isaac. It is universally considered one of Britten's greatest concert works and was chosen to be the final work heard in the Guildhall School of Music and Drama's series of eight concerts marking the 25th anniversary of Britten's death in 2001. Other duets on the program include excerpts from J.S. Bach's Magnificat and from a series of duets entitled An Elizabethan Songbook. This new collection was written by Eric Ewazen, Professor of Composition at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, as a wedding present for mezzo-soprano Cheryl Laser and tenor James Beal.

In addition to the duets, Swensen also will sing Claude Debussy's impressionistic masterwork, the Trois chansons de Bilitis, and a set of songs by the Finnish master, Jean Sibelius, while Dr. Zeller counters the Ewazen Elizabethan Songbook selections by offering a sampling from another "songbook," Hugo Wolf's epigrammatic Italienisches Liederbuch. ■

Panocha String Quartet, Andras Schiff To Play Carnegie Hall Program at Spivey

On Sunday, Oct. 24 at 3 p.m., the Panocha String Quartet will join pianist András Schiff at Spivey Hall to perform a program featuring Janacék's String Quartets Nos. 1 and 2, and Dvorák's Piano Quintet in A Minor, part of Schiff's three-part Janacék project performed at Carnegie Hall on Oct. 22

Born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1953, pianist and conductor András Schiff is an artist of remarkable talent and range. He began piano lessons at the age of five and continued his musical studies at the Ferenc Liszt Academy. Recitals and special projects take him to all of the international music capitals and include cycles of the major keyboard works of Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Schubert and Bartók

Tickets for András Schiff's performance with the Panocha String Quartet are $40. For reservations call the Spivey Hall Box Office at (770) 960-4200. Spivey Hall's concert series is sponsored in part by The Walter & Emilie Spivey Foundation, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, Delta Air Lines, 91.9 WCLK and 90.1 WABE. ■

Sax Great Joe Lovano Brings His Nonet to Spivey Hall

Grammy-nominated tenor saxophonist Joe Lovano and his nine-member ensemble will perform at Clayton State's Spivey Hall on Friday, Oct. 29 at 8:15 p.m.

The New York Times has called Lovano, "One of the greatest musicians in jazz history." As a constantly evolving creative force in the jazz world, Lovano has played with every configuration from duos to his current nine-member ensemble, and in every style from swing and bebop to Sinatra tributes.

He collaborates with today's leading young voices, such as piano phenom Jason Moran. He has topped the Downbeat Critics Poll as 'Jazz Artist of the Year' and 'Best Tenor Saxophonist,' and been dubbed 'A Modern Master' by Jazztimes. Pianist John Hicks and drummer Lewis Nash are two of the top-flight players joining Lovano at Spivey Hall.

During the last decade, Lovano has recorded 10 albums and received 3 Grammy nominations and one Grammy Award in 2000 for "Best Large Jazz Ensemble Album." As the Village Voice proclaimed, "Move over Pavarotti, the great Italian tenor around today isn't Luciano, but Lovano."

Tickets for the Joe Lovano Nonet performance are $30. For reservations call the Spivey Hall Box Office at (770) 960-4200. ■

Her publications have appeared in "Classical Singer" and "The Mentoring Connection." She teaches Applied Voice, Song Literature and Vocal Pedagogy at Clayton State.

The Budapest trip is a follow-up to Harden's October 2003 Educational/Trade/Cultural mission to Hungary, Romania and the Czech Republic that included five of the Southern Crescent's foremost educational, business and cultural leaders; Harden, Grant Wainscott, vice president of the Clayton County Chamber of Commerce, Robert Lee, owner of Southside Seafood and currently president of the Clayton College & State University Foundation Board of Trustees, Sherryl Nelson, executive director of Spivey Hall, and Rev. Lanny Loe of the First Baptist Church of Jonesboro.

"This opportunity for our students to perform at the Liszt Academy is the most exciting outcome of that trip," says Harden.

Liszt Academy Director of Studies Franciska Ispan believes the prospect of student and faculty exchange with Clayton State will build greater understanding and appreciation of the cultures and the people of Central Europe and the Southeastern United States. ■

Clayton State Observes National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

In recognition of October being National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the Nurse Managed Clinic at Clayton College & State University will be sponsoring several activities for Clayton State faculty, staff and students on Oct. 5 and Oct. 6 in the University's Student Center.

Tables will be set up in the Student Center Cafeteria on Tuesday, Oct. 5 from noon to 3 p.m. and on Wednesday from noon to 6 p.m. to distribute important information, pink ribbons and candy. The breast cancer information will provide facts about disease and the importance of mammograms, clinical breast exams and monthly self-breast exams.

Kaiser Permanente staff will be available both days of the Breast Cancer Awareness campaign to provide free blood pressure screenings and body fat assessments at the tables.

Part of the campaign activities will include Dr. D. Ann Travis providing information on risks and treatment of breast cancer and free breast screenings in the Nurse Managed Clinic (room 207 of the Student Center) on Wednesday, Oct. 6 from 1:30 p.m. until 3:30 p.m.

This year about 215,990 American women have been diagnosed with invasive breast cancer, making it second only to skin cancer as the most common cancer in women. Breast cancer is second only to lung cancer in the number of overall deaths in this country. More than 40,000 women will die from breast cancer this year unless the cancer is detected early.

The traditional pink ribbon is the symbol for Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The Nurse Managed Clinic will be given ribbons, mints and information to all who would like to receive these items in observance of breast cancer awareness month. ■

"Debt hurts our ability to compete," continued Barnes. "China and Japan hold our debt. How can we negotiate from a position of strength?"

Barnes also spoke on how Georgia has historically positioned itself for greatness; especially during the Civil Rights movement of the 1960's.

"Georgia has been a great place to live, to work, and to raise children," he emphasized. "Why? Because we have had a consensus as a people; we agreed on the big issues."

Those issues were tied to then Gov. Carl Sanders' creation of a more moderate racial climate in the state during the turbulent later years of the civil rights movement. Sanders recognized the futility in continued resistance to federal legislation and court rulings. He cooperated with both the Kennedy and Johnson administrations in insisting on compliance with the new Federal civil rights laws, Barnes said.

As Barnes concluded his lecture, he spoke on what, in his opinion, were the key problems facing Georgia today... 1) Traffic; 2) Development; 3) Education.

"We don't seem to be able to take on these problems," said Barnes. "We can't have unbridled growth. It strains our natural resources and our infrastructure."

As governor, Barnes was known for his impact on education. He got personal about the recent cuts in education by the current administration, and equated it with economic development.

"The currency of this current economy is not dollars and cents," he said. "It is knowledge and information. I'd have scraped the gold off the capitol dome before cutting education funding. How can we be globally and economically competitive with only one-tenth of our freshman completing college?"

"No government can exist without priorities. On the state level, that should be education."

When asked by one student how he should vote in the upcoming election, Barnes responded, "Ask yourself this question. Am I better off today than four years ago? That is your answer."

Barnes is a lifetime legislator, lawyer, and businessman. After law school, he became a prosecutor in the Cobb County district attorney's office. In 1974, at age 26, he ran successfully for the Georgia Senate, becoming one of the youngest legislators ever elected in Georgia, and in 1998, he became the 80th governor of Georgia. Because of his tenure with the Georgia legislature, senate, and as governor, Barnes has become a principal authority in politics in the State of Georgia.

Over the years, Barnes has won numerous awards including the Kennedy Profiles in Courage Award in 2003 and the First Amendment Foundation Charles Weltner Award in 2004. He currently serves as chair of the National Board of Professional Teaching Standards and is on the advisory board of the National Council on Teacher Quality. ■

Disney NIT Tip-Off Tournament Highlights 2004-05 Clayton State Men's Basketball Schedule

by Gid Rowell, Sports Information

The Clayton State men's basketball program is getting ready to hit hardwood, and fourth-year head coach Gordon Gibbons recently announced the Lakers' 2004-05 slate of games, the most ambitious schedule in the program's 15-year history.

Clayton State's 30-game schedule is highlighted by an invitation to play in the prestigious Disney NIT Tip-Off Tournament, which features eight of the nation's best teams in NCAA Division II basketball. The annual event staged at the Walt Disney World Resort at Disney's Wide World of Sports Complex begins on Friday, Nov. 12 and runs three days with games also on Saturday and Sunday. Also competing in the tournament will be Bentley (Mass.), Barry (Fla.), Indiana-Pennsylvania, North Florida, North Dakota, Henderson State (Ark.) and Florida Gulf Coast.

The Lakers will open the tournament on Friday against Indiana-Pennsylvania, a team that finished last season with a 21-10 record and is the defending Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference champions, winning the conference crown for the third time in five years. IU PA is the first college from north of the Mason-Dixon Line that Clayton State has played in basketball since the program began in 1990.

Fans will get their first glimpse of the Lakers in two home exhibition games in early November. The first exhibition contest is slated for Monday, Nov. 1 against Baseline USA, followed by a match-up with VASDA on Sunday, Nov. 7.

After tipping off its season with three games in the Disney tournament, Clayton State will open its home season on Tuesday, Nov. 16, hosting Reinhardt College, a NAIA squad from North Georgia that won the Georgia-Alabama-Carolina Conference tournament last year with a 22-14 record. ■

they had better looks in the first half, and we came back and had better shots in the second."

The match was almost even in shots, as UNC Pembroke finished with 12 shots compared to Clayton State's 11. The Lakers had four corner kicks to the Braves' one. Clayton State keeper Heath Padgett finished with four saves, while UNCP goalie Richard Sallin had three.

The loss drops the Lakers to 7-1-1 on the year and 1-1 in the Peach Belt. Clayton State will return to action next Saturday, October 2nd, traveling to face another nationally ranked Peach Belt foe in 25th-ranked the University of South Carolina Upstate in a 7 p.m. match

With eight minutes remaining, the University of North Carolina Pembroke's Simonae Taylor scored the game-winning goal to lift the Braves to 2-1 victory over the Clayton State women.

After a scoreless match for over 73 minutes, UNCP and Clayton State scored three goals in an eight-minute stretch near the end of the contest. UNCP's Dana Henderson gave the Braves a 1-0 lead at 74-minute mark on a goal off an assist from Brenna Russick. The Lakers knotted the game at 1-1 four minutes later as Nkiru Okosieme converted a penalty kick, setting up Taylor's game-winner. ■

Trivia Time

Hurricane Season

by John Shiffert, University Relations

They called him Bob "Hurricane" Hazle, after the famous storm that almost wiped out North Carolina in 1954. However, this was 1957, and the Milwaukee Braves were struggling with the St. Louis Cardinals for supremacy in the National League. (Sort of what's going to happen again in a couple of weeks... this time with a different result.)

Amazingly, even on a team with Hank Aaron, Eddie Mathews, Warren Spahn, et al, the Braves were led that summer by a 26 year-old career minor leaguer, whose entire previous major league career consisted of six games with the Redlegs (you didn't dare call them "Reds" in the McCarthy Era) in 1955. Out of nowhere, Bob Hazle came up out of the minors and hit .403 in 41 games, with a .477 on-base average and a .649 slugging percentage. The Braves won the pennant (and the World Series... yes, that actually happened once upon a time) and then Bob Hazle went back to anonymity, playing a total of 63 more games in the majors in 1958, and hitting .211.

Clayton State's man for all seasons, John Kosky, knew about Hurricane Hazle. So did alum and former Bent Tree Sports Editor Kevin Dixon. Now, in keeping with the baseball theme... what do Dr. Art Rosser and Pete Rose have in common? First correct answer to johnshiffert@mail.clayton.edu gets to make excuses for this year's Braves' playoff flop.

Kreutzer Wins Again, Sets Another School Record; Laker Men Capture Wingate Invitational Team Title

by Gid Rowell, Sports Information

In the first two collegiate meets of her career, Clayton College & State University freshman Allison Kreutzer is two-for-two. She has run in two Laker cross country meets, won both of them and in the process shattered two school records.

For the second week in a row, Kreutzer took top honors in her race, this time setting a new school record in the 6K, winning the Wingate Invitational with a time of 22:11 in Wingate, N.C. She broke former Laker standout Joni Guffey's 6K mark of 22:33 set in 2001. Kreutzer previously won the college division of the Georgia State Invitational at Decatur's Panthersville course, posting a time of 18:02, breaking the school 5K record set last season by Heather Krehbiel of 18:25.

In addition to Kreutzer's top performance, the Clayton State men's team also brought home some hardware, capturing the first place trophy in the 10K event. Clayton State won the 18-team meet with three runners finishing in the top nine. The Lakers finished with a meet-low 53 points, eight points ahead of St. Andrews Presbyterian College.

Junior Jose Garduno was the top Laker, finishing second with a time of 34:24. Other standouts for the Lakers were senior Oscar Campos in sixth with a time of 35:01 and junior Manuel Aguilar in ninth with a time of 35:05.

The Clayton State women's squad also had an impressive team finish, placing second in the 21-team meet with 115 points behind host Wingate with 85 points.

Soccer Loses Two to UNC Pembroke

In a match featuring the two highest-ranked Peach Belt Conference men's soccer teams in the country, the fourth-ranked University of North Carolina Pembroke prevailed 1-0 over 13th-ranked Clayton State in Pembroke, NC.

UNC Pembroke scored the lone goal of the match 23 minutes into play on an unassisted shot by Graeme Little from 20 yards out.

"We have nothing to be ashamed about, we played well," said first year head coach Pete Petersen. "UNC Pembroke is an excellent team. It could have gone either way. I thought
